LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE MAKE PLANS FOR DENVER

Dear ASC Member:

The Mile High City of Denver is one of America's most popular convention centers. In the final stages of a massive urban revitalization, Denver's downtown has added numerous facilities for the convention visitor. Perhaps the centerpiece is the 16th Street Mall, a pedestrian walkway designed by I. M. Pei and Associates. Several new hotels have opened including the ASC's choice of the Denver Marriott-City Center which was just awarded four stars by the 1983 Mobil Travel Guide. Downtown restaurant facilities are excellent featuring a variety of styles, prices, and cuisine. Larimer Square, a historic block, may be visited by means of a new mall bus service and is a visitor favorite for its shops, restaurants, and entertainment. For the ASC Meeting, a Local Arrangements Committee has been organized and is planning to sponsor special events including a skiing tour, wine tastings, and other special events.

The 1983 ASC Denver Meeting promises to be one of the most interesting and successful meetings you will attend. The Local Arrangements Committee looks forward to welcoming ASC members to Denver in November and providing you a most exciting city for our Annual Meeting.

Sincerely,
James Weissman, Chair
Local Arrangements Committee

MEMBER PUBLICATIONS WANTED FOR EXHIBIT

Harve Horowitz, ASC Advertising/Exhibits representative, has asked that members of the Society who have published works in the past year notify him of such publications. It has become a regular feature at the Annual Meeting that ASC member publications be displayed at the combined book exhibit. Members are also being asked to contact their publishers to encourage them to arrange for booths at the meeting. Those persons who have recently published books should send the titles, year of publication, and publisher to Horowitz, 10369 Currycomb Court, Columbia, MD 21044 (301/997-0763.)

ACJS 1984 CALL FOR PAPERS

The Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences will hold its Annual Meeting in Chicago, Illinois on March 27-31, 1984. The theme of the meeting will be "The Politics of Crime and Criminal Justice." The Palmer House Hotel will be the meeting site. The call for papers has been issued and the deadline for submitting abstracts for proposed papers is November 1. For more information, contact Vincent J. Webb, Program Chair, Center for Applied Urban Research, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Omaha, Nebraska 68182.

From the Editor . . .

Several suggestions have been made regarding possible revisions to THE CRIMINOLOGIST. I would like your reactions to the following ideas:

- Articles on recent legislation at both federal and state levels;
- Reports on research conducted or being conducted by membership;
- Book reviews;
- Funding possibilities;
- Grants awarded to membership;
- Short articles or debates on current issues such as determinate sentencing, legislation (proposed or enacted) or various other topics; and
- Advertisements from publishers and others.

Any expansion of size or length of THE CRIMINOLOGIST will incur additional costs and require agreement from the Executive Board. If we attempt to solicit advertising we might well be able to cover such additional costs.

THE CRIMINOLOGIST, by virtue of the fact that it is published six times a year, could enhance additional materials. Through THE CRIMINOLOGIST we can quickly and efficiently share information and ideas not possible in journals. To add to our coverage, members must be willing to provide materials. Through the network of the membership we can become a more significant information resource.

If you would like to make other suggestions, to comment on any of the proposed suggestions, or to volunteer to serve as a resource for any of the above suggestions, please let me know.

CRIMINOLOGY EDITOR SOUGHT

Marguerite Q. Warren, ASC vice president and chair of the Publications Committee, has announced that the Society has commenced its search for the next editor of the journal, CRIMINOLOGY. It is expected that the Executive Board will review applications and select the new editor within the next eight months.

Since a great deal of time must be devoted to this quarterly publication, all prospective candidates not only must describe personal credentials in an application but also indicate that the base agency or university is willing to provide the back-up resources required for such an effort.

Estimates of university support required include: 50% release time for the editor, part-time secretarial time, graduate student help, totalling an estimated cost of $10,000-15,000 per year, in addition to the editors release time.

Although the new editor will not officially take charge of the journal immediately, it has become the tradition of ASC that he or she will work with the outgoing editor for at least one year in order to become familiar with publications procedures.

All serious candidates should communicate with Warren regarding details that will be required in the application. Submission deadline: September 1, 1983. For additional technical information, candidates should communicate with the present editor, Charles W. Thomas.

Warren's address is: School of Criminal Justice, SUNY-Albany, 135 Western Avenue, Albany, NY 12222 (518/455-6274).

INSTITUTE ON DRUGS, CRIME AND JUSTICE

The 8th Institute on Drugs, Crime, and Justice in England and America announces its 1983 program for July 6 through July 23, 1983. The Institute combines a College course for credit and a non-credit professional course.

The College course runs from July 6-23 and with successful passage of an examination brings 6 credits. Costs: (1) academic tuition plus private room - $1375; (2) tuition only - $975.

The professional conference is designed for professionals in the fields of drug abuse, criminal justice, social work, law, medicine, hospice operations, and nursing. Costs: (3) conference fee plus private room and breakfast (July 10-14) - $475; (4) conference only - $350.

RESUMES AND STATEMENTS OF THE ASC'S CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE

PRESIDENT-ELECT

DON C. GIBBONS

B.A., 1950, M.A., 1953, Ph.D. (Sociology) 1956, University of Washington. Prof. of Sociology and Urban Studies, Portland State University. Previously Prof., San Francisco State College. Also taught at University of British Columbia, Washington, Arizona State, Oregon, San Diego State, Stanford. Fellow, American Society of Criminology. Author or co-author of Changing the Lawbreaker (1965), Society, Crime, and Criminal Behavior (1968), Delinquent Behavior (1970), Becoming Delinquent (1970), The Study of Deviance (1975), Criminal Justice Planning (1977), The Criminological Enterprise (1979). Numerous articles and reports on delinquency, crime, deviant behavior, and related topics.

STATEMENT: Criminology and criminal justice are "where the action is." The scientific study of law-making, lawbreaking, and social responses to crime fairly crackles with the excitement of new, critical challenges to criminological theory, important new research findings, and other contributions from the variety of fields of scholarly endeavor that make up this multidisciplinary enterprise. Obviously, we don't have all the answers, but we have identified many of the major questions and have generated a good deal of solid evidence bearing upon them. Those of us in The American Society of Criminology who are concerned both with basic scholarship and with the application of knowledge are faced with some exceedingly difficult tasks in the years ahead, as we strive to contribute to the development of humane, just social policies that will honor the rights of all participants in "the crime problem": offenders, victims, and other citizens. I hope to be able to make a few contributions to criminology and criminal justice in the years ahead. And, if elected, I would work to keep our Society moving, expanding the frontiers of knowledge and enlarging our voice in public policy formulation.

AUSTIN T. TURK

B.A., 1956, University of Georgia; M.A., 1959, University of Kentucky; Ph.D., 1962, University of Wisconsin. Prof. of Sociology and Criminology at the University of Toronto. Formerly prof. of sociology and director of the graduate training program in deviance and control at Indiana University. Visiting prof. at the Universities of Natal (1969), Minnesota (1977), and Pennsylvania (1980-81). Chair, Section on Criminology of the American Sociological Association, 1975-76, and President, North Central Sociological Association, 1976-77. Fellow and Vice President-Elect, American Society of Criminology. Trustee, Law and Society Association. Board of Directors, Research Committee for the Sociology of Deviance and Social Control, International Sociological Association. Editor or reviewer for numerous social science journals, and presently is assoc. editor of CRIMINOLOGY, and the Law and Society Review. Books: Criminality and Legal Order (1969); an abridged edition of Willem Bongers' Criminality and Economic Conditions (1969); Legal Sanctioning and Social Control (1972); Political Criminality: The Defiance and Defense of Authority (1982).

STATEMENT: Criminologists face increasing pressure to justify our works in both intellectual and practical terms. Alternative paradigms compete for attention and resources. We are variously enjoined to focus upon legally defined criminal acts, politically or morally defined exploitation and oppression, or the historical and functional sources of definitions of harm and wrong. At the same time, relevance is demanded — knowledge helpful in efforts to preserve or adapt existing social orders, or to transform or supplant them. The time is gone when an easy eclecticism could be invoked to avoid the hard issues of either theory or practice. Gone also is the time of programmatic arguments about what criminologists should study, how, and to what ends. Instead of promoting and debating alternative paradigms, we need now to explore their possibilities in research — including the possibility that seeming alternatives may complement rather than exclude one another, once we understand their appropriate uses. Similarly, it is time to supersede the distinction between basic and applied research. While methodological rigor remains our constant aim, theoretically enlightening research in our field can no longer be insulated from the risky but powerful testing made possible by committing our ideas and skills in the arenas of policy and practice. Though success in such arenas does not in itself prove the validity of a theory, nor failure its error, theoretical advances in criminology depend upon our being in position to make the observations we need. More and more, we will have to get involved to gain the necessary access — and thus to have the chance to contribute what we can to making the world a safer and more decent place.

VICE PRESIDENT-ELECT

JOAN McCORD

B.A., 1952, Stanford University; M.A., 1966, Ph.D. (Sociology) 1968, Stanford. Fellow, American Society of Criminology. Prof. of Sociology, Department of Psychology and Sociology, Drexel University (since 1968). ASC Chair, 1980 Gene Carte Student Awards Committee. Author/co-author of over 50 articles, chapters, and books on topics that include crime prevention, causes of crime, effectiveness of punishments, female criminality, psychopathy, and alcoholism. President of local chapters of A.A.U.P. (1975-76) and Sigma Xi (1980-81). Principal Investigator of N.I.M.H. grant, Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, to study personality development. Consultant to Josephs J. Peters Institute, Evaluation Research Group, White House Conference on Children and Youth, Pennsylvania Governor's Justice Committee. Ad hoc research reviewer for The Grant Foundation; Social Science Research Council of Great Britain; National Science Foundation; Law Enforcement Assistance Association; Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

STATEMENT: The American Society of Criminology has become a forum in which important ideas can be discussed intelligently. The Society must work to protect the diversity that such a forum represents. Good criminology depends on good relationships between practitioners and researchers. The ASC should continue to develop the ties and mutual respect upon which good relationships depend. The Society should also work to maintain high standards for research and dissemination of ideas. In my opinion, the ASC should expand its attempts to gain support for research and increase its efforts to have an impact on policy.

A. B., Harvard, 1939. M.A., Indiana University, 1942. Ph.D., Harvard, 1951. Prof. of Sociology, University of Connecticut. Taught at Indiana University 1948-65, University of Connecticut, 1965-present. President, Society for the Study of Social Problems, 1972-73. At various times executive committee and other offices, ASA. Chair, Awards Committee, A.S.C., 1982-83. Books, articles and chapters include: Delinquent Boys: The Culture of the Gang and Deviance and Control. Either chapters or articles, "The Structure of the Deviant Act: Anomie Theory and Beyond"; "Social Control and Subcultural Change"; "The Concept of Criminal Organization"; "Sociological Theories of Crime Causation" (Encyclopedia of Criminology, MacMillan, in press).

STATEMENT: I should like to see this society try to encourage renewed interest in: criminological theory, which has, I think, fallen into neglect; the properties of large scale social systems that account for the differences among them in crime; scrutiny of the discipline of criminology — its more the causes of criminology, if you will — to understand better why our theories and our views of criminal justice fluctuate so widely with so little apparent relation to new empirical evidence; and ways of fostering criminological work that is not encouraged by the existing structure of funding and reward.

EXECUTIVE COUNSELORWILLIAM CHAMBLISS

B.A., 1955, UCLA; M.A., 1960, PH.D. (Sociology) 1962, Indiana University. Prof. of Sociology, Department of Sociology, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware, and Honorary Professorial Fellow, Faculty of Law, University College, Cardiff, Wales. Chair of the Criminology Section, American Sociological Association (1982-83); program committee for American Society of Criminology (1980); Treasurer, Society for the Study of Social Problems (1968-69); Executive Council, Pacific Sociological Association (1969-70). Former positions: University of Washington (1962-66); University of California/Santa Barbara (1967-74); Russell Sage Resident in Law and Society, University of Wisconsin (1966-67). Visiting Professor at Universitet of Ibadan, Nigeria (1969-70); London School of Economics (1970-71); University of Uppsala, Uppsala, Sweden (1970); University of Oslo, Oslo, Norway (1974-75); University of Stockholm, Stockholm, Sweden (1975-76). Editor and Founder of the journal Contemporary Crises. Author of over a dozen books the latest being the second edition of Law Order and Power (1982); Organizing Crime (with Alan Block, 1981); On The Take: From Petty Crooks To Presidents (1978). Articles in journals, chapters in books, etc. Currently researching international heroin trafficking and piracy.

STATEMENT: The American Society of Criminology is becoming increasingly recognized as the primary professional association for social scientists and practitioners concerned with the study and social policy of crime. With this growing recognition our responsibility grows apace. We must make certain that the recent trend towards the incorporation of diverse theoretical and political positions within the Society is maintained. We must also continue to encourage participation by people from all over the world, and especially from all of North and South America. And we must serve as a society that encourages a participation that is effective in creating social policy.

MS. DREW HUMPHRIES

B.A., 1967; M. Criminology, 1968; D. of Crim., 1973, University of California, Berkeley. Associate Prof. of Sociology, Rutgers University, Camden, New Jersey. Editorial Advisory Board, Crime and Social Justice; Assistant Editor, Insurgent Sociologist. ASC service: Nominations Committee, 1980-81, conference participant and members. Author: Crime in the News: Perception and Interpretation and articles on crime and its control in Social Problems, Crime and Delinquency, Contemporary Crises, and Crime and Social Justice.

STATEMENT: I think the ASC has made major strides in the last decade. And I see my role as Executive Counselor as protecting and extending the role of women, minorities, and students in the organization; as maintaining the diversity of opinion and perspective among the membership, bringing new ideas into the association; and as continuing the dialogue between practitioners, academics, and policy makers not only to disseminate scholarship but to facilitate job placement in this time of academic crisis.

PLAN TO ATTEND THE 35th Annual Meeting

The American Society of Criminology

Denver Marriott Hotel – City Center November 9-13, 1983

The American Society of Criminology will hold its 35th Annual Meeting in Colorado at the Denver Marriott Hotel – City Center. The theme of this year's meeting is: "The Causes and Consequences of Crime: Multidisciplinary Contributions". The program includes a broad range of topics concerning the problems of crime and their impact on society. Along with the major topical areas of the program, numerous special sessions are scheduled on a series of pertinent issues including the role of the mass media and crime, world crime trends and specialized-interdisciplinary topics such as the economic, psychological, legalistic, political and historical approaches utilized in understanding crime.

Pre-Convention Workshop Series

Denver Marriott Hotel – City Center November 7-9, 1983

The Society has scheduled for the first time a number of workshops prior to the beginning of the Annual Meeting. The workshops will allow members the opportunity for continued personal development in a number of areas of common interest. Three workshops are scheduled: I.) Estimating Causal Models: An Introduction (two-day session); II.) The Criminal Justice Archive and Information Network (one-day session); III.) The Nature, Uses and Limitations of Criminological Theory (one-day session). Each workshop will be limited to the first 30 paid registrants. The registration cost has been kept to the minimal fee of $25.00 for the two day workshop and $15.00 for each of the one day workshops. The fee is non-refundable.

PRE-CONVENTION WORKSHOPS

I.) ESTIMATING CAUSAL MODELS: AN INTRODUCTION

November 7th (1pm-5pm), November 8th (8am-5pm) and November 9th (8am-noon), 1983.

Dr. Elton F. Jackson

Indiana University

This workshop will provide an introduction to, and practice in working with, statistical methods to estimate the direction and strength of causal effects among a set of variables.

The workshop will include: (1) a general introduction to causal models, including expressing models (both recursive and nonrecursive) as causal diagrams and in terms of structural equations; (2) how to make sure that your model is identifiable (that is, that estimates of the effects can actually be obtained); and (3) several different ways to obtain estimates of the effects specified by the theory, including ordinary least squares (path analysis estimation), indirect least squares, and two-stage least squares.

The workshop assumes that participants have a working knowledge of multiple regression.

Dr. Jackson is the former chair, and current faculty member, of the Department of Sociology at Indiana University. He has published extensively in the area of measurement and the use of multiple indicators in survey research. He is the coauthor of Inequality in American Communities and has served as associate, consulting or advisory editor for the American Sociological Review, American Journal of Sociology, Sociometry and Sociological Methodology.

II.) THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE ARCHIVE AND INFORMATION NETWORK

November 7th (1pm-5pm) and November 8th (8am-noon), 1983.

Drs. Michael W. Traugott and Christopher A. Innes

Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research

Dr. Traugott is the Director of Resource Development at the ICPSR and principal investigator on the CJAIN project. Dr. Innes is the Assistant Director of the ICPSR Archive and Project Manager for the CJAIN.

The Criminal Justice Archive and Information Network workshop will focus upon resources available from the archive, alternative modes of access to CJAIN data, and other special CJAIN activities. It will include demonstrations of remote computer access to the criminal justice data bases.

III.) THE NATURE, USES AND LIMITATIONS OF CRIMINOLOGICAL THEORY

November 8th (1pm-5pm) and November 9th (8am-noon), 1983.

Dr. Lamar T. Empey

University of Southern California

Participants will examine a number of concerns in criminological theory. For example, it has become fashionable to argue that attempts to explain crime are fruitless. They have no value, neither for science nor for social policy. Throughout history, however, age, gender, race, social class and type of community have been consistently associated with arrest, self reported commission of criminal acts and victimization. Fashionable assumptions notwithstanding, certain repeated and observable "facts" demand explanation.

Applying three major criteria for evaluating any theory—namely, its logical, empirical and pragmatic adequacy—this workshop will be devoted to an examination of criminological theory. How well does it explain existing "facts"? Does it have value either for science or social policy?

Professor Empey has written extensively on the topic of criminological theory. He is the author or coauthor of numerous books, including: American Delinquency: Its Meaning and Construction, The Future of Childhood and Juvenile Justice, The Provo Experiment: Evaluating Community Control of Delinquency and The Silver Lake Experiment: Testing Delinquency Theory and Community Intervention.

CONVENTION PROGRAM TOPICAL AREAS

THE 35TH ANNUAL MEETING will include the following topical areas:

THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM, including such areas as the juvenile justice system, law enforcement, prosecution, courts, and punishment. For further information contact: Rita Simon, Institute of Communication Research, 505 Armory, University of Illinois, Champaign, IL 61820.

CRIMINAL POLICY: FORMULATION, IMPLEMENTATION AND EVALUATION will include evaluation studies, decriminalization, governmental impact upon policy, funding sources, and current policy and needed change. For further information contact: Maynard L. Erickson, Department of Sociology, University of Arizona, Tucson AZ 85721.

CRIMINOLOGICAL RESEARCH ISSUES AND SPECIALIZED TOPICS will encompass not only research technology and ethical issues, but also research into types of crime, theoretical variables and the effect of social states and other specialized topics. For further information contact: Charles R. Tittle, Department of Sociology and Social Psychology, Florida Atlantic University, Boca Raton, FL 33431.

CRIMINOLOGICAL THEORY will formulate panels analyzing theories of crime and crime control, theory and ideology and/or practice in criminology and the theoretical issues of law, state and society. For further information contact: Steven Spitzer, Department of Sociology, Suffolk University, 8 Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108.

MULTIDISCIPLINARY AND INTERDISCIPLINARY APPROACHES TO CRIMINOLOGY will incorporate the areas of biology, economics, history, law, psychiatry, psychology and the social and behavioral sciences. For further information contact: Saleem A. Shah, Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, N.I.M.H. - Room 6C-15, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINOLOGY will include sessions on comparative criminal justice systems and criminology, political ideologies and crime, and the differential responses to crime. For further information contact: Duncan Chappell, Criminology Department, Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, British Columbia, Canada V5A 1S6.

ISSUES ON WOMEN AND CRIME will have panels addressing such topics as theories of female criminality, women as crime victims and women offenders and professionals in the criminal justice system. For further information contact: Phyllis Jo Baunach, Bureau of Justice Statistics, Room 1158-D, 633 Indiana Ave. N.W., Washington, DC 20531.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION contact Joseph E. Scott, Program Chair, Department of Sociology, The Ohio State University, 300 Administration Bldg., Columbus, Ohio 43210.

Articles in CRIMINOLOGY, Social Problems, Social Forces, American Sociological Review, American Journal of Sociology, Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology and Human Organization.

STATEMENT: The scientific study of crime as an academic discipline has been dominated by sociologists, and The American Society of Criminology has attracted an increasing number of prominent sociologists over the years. As an interdisciplinary society, we must continually promote representation of emphases and interests of practitioners, criminal justice administrators and policy specialists. With the development of competing associations which may be more attractive to nonacademicians and applied researchers, the original broad and interdisciplinary emphasis of the Society must be publicized and promoted. The Society should concertedlly avoid becoming an exclusively academic society.

MARGARET ANN ZAHN

B.S., 1963; M.A., 1964, Ohio State University; Ph.D., 1969, Sociology, Ohio State University. Assoc. Prof. of Sociology, and Director of Program in Deviance and Criminology, Temple University. Director, Nationwide National Institute of Justice Study of Nature and Patterns of American Homicide, 1980-1982. Formerly, evaluator of Philadelphia Prisons for Governor's Justice Commission, 1973-1976. Coordinator of Sociology Program, Temple University Abroad, Rome, Italy, 1978-1979. ASC service: Executive Board member 1972-1976; registration chair, New York, 1972; chair, Site Selection Committee, 1977; member then chair, Nominations Committee; member of Women and Crime Division, former member, International Liaison Committee and Public Policy Committee. Assistant editor of CRIMINOLOGY, 1973-1977. Author/co-author of numerous book chapters and articles in CRIMINOLOGY, History and Crime, International Journal of the Addictions, Journal of Health and Social Behavior, Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice. Currently completing book on Homicide in America.

STATEMENT: In the 14 years that I have been a member of the ASC, I have always appreciated its role as a forum for diverse opinion and the spirit of warm collegueship that exists among our members. As an executive counselor, I would work to maintain and extend that spirit of collegueship and provide continued support for vigorous diverse interchange. Additionally, I would work for: (1) the extension of criminological knowledge through support for more historical interdisciplinary and international research and exchange; (2) additional recruitment of women, minorities and younger members into effective positions of the Society. One way to stimulate this is by encouraging appointment of such members to working committees of the organization. (3) ASC support for criminological research. In an era of declining funds for research, it behooves us to provide support by establishing a small research fund to be distributed, through a granting format, for research of various persuasions. This small fund should augment other attempts by the Society to stimulate national and private funding. (4) programs to support more effective interaction between policymakers at all levels of government, practitioners and academicians. A vigorous and responsive executive board, with a fully acknowledged set of broadly based committees, should allow us to accomplish these objectives plus the many others inherent in an organization that attempts to wed intellectual promise with practical purpose.

DEPARTMENTAL NEWS AND NOTES

Carnegie-Mellon University: The School of Urban and Public Affairs, with the support of the Center for Studies in Crime and Delinquency of NIMH, is offering a post-doctoral in Quantitative Methods in Criminal Justice. The program brings together specialists in disciplines related to the problems of crime and criminal justice with persons whose principal training is in methodology. Participants will: (1) engage in an active empirical research program; (2) participate in a seminar focusing on research approaches in criminal justice and relevant policy issues; and (3) study relevant methodological techniques of econometrics, statistics, stochastic processes, and computer simulation. Participants are expected to produce several publishable papers as a result of participation in the program. In addition to a stipend of at least $13,380 (depending on years of post-doctoral experience), all training costs and research resources are provided by the training grant. Some pre-doctoral fellowships are available for individuals with at least two years of graduate study. Participation may begin July, 1983. Contact: Alfred Blumstein, School of Urban and Public Affairs, Carnegie-Mellon Univ., Pittsburgh, PA 15213.

University of Michigan: The Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research will hold a four week seminar from June 27 to July 22, 1983 on Quantitative Analysis of Crime and Criminal Justice. Designed to introduce scholars to the facilities and holdings of the National Criminal Justice Archive of the ICPSR at the Univ. of Michigan, participants work on research of their own choice and meet regularly for discussion and lectures by scholars in the field. Stipend support is available and participants may attend other courses in the Summer Program. For information and application contact Colin Loftin, Center for Political Studies, R. 4005 Institute for Social Research, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106; phone: 313/764-2301; or Henry Heitowitz, Box 1248, Ann Arbor, MI 48106.

University of Southern California: Applications are invited for an interdisciplinary traineeship in Monitoring and Evaluating Deviance Control Efforts as part of an NIMH pre- and post doctoral program. Appointees acquire familiarity with a variety of projects in numerous organizations. Coursework may be taken to fill gaps in prior training; and trainees are aided in new research efforts. Provide vita and indicate research interests to Carol Warren, Social Science Research Institute, Univ. of Southern California, Los Angeles, CA 90089.

California State College, San Bernardino has established a master's degree in Criminal Justice. The concentration is in criminal justice administration and classes will be offered in the evenings, beginning in Fall, 1983. This program is in addition to the bachelor's and certificate programs. Dear Colleague:

This is a reminder to renew your 1983 membership in The American Society of Criminology. Your membership includes a copy of the membership directory and subscriptions to CRIMINOLOGY: An Interdisciplinary Journal and THE CRIMINOLOGIST.

If you prefer, you may renew for a 3-year period of $70.00 with a savings of $5.00. For members in good standing for the last five years, you may opt for a Life Membership for $250, which is 10 times the annual dues. Members of the Division on International Criminology (DIC) and the Division on Women and Crime (DWC) may include their annual Division dues ($5.00) with their ASC membership dues. Please check the appropriate box below, and return this form and your check (in U.S. FUNDS).
