HERBERT BLOCH AWARD TO JOSEPH E. SCOTT

Joseph E. Scott, Program Chair of the 1983 Annual Meeting, has been named the 1983 winner of the Herbert Bloch award for his outstanding service to the Society and the profession.

The award reflects Scott's extensive contributions to the Society including membership on the Executive Board (1974-1981), Editor of THE CRIMINOLOGIST (1975-1978), Executive Secretary (1975-1981), Chair of the Ethics Committee (1978-1980), and Chair of the Finance Committee (1978-79).

In addition to his extensive contributions to the Society, Scott has a long record of community service, and professional publications.

He is currently an Associate Professor at The Ohio State University, and Director of the Criminology and Criminal Justice Major.

Since 1976 the Herbert Bloch winners have been: Harry E. Allen (1977); Barbara Raffel Price (1978); William E. Amos and Edward Sagarin, (1979); Alvin W. Cohn (1980); and James Inciardi (1982).

GIBBS RECOGNIZED WITH SUTHERLAND AWARD

Jack Gibb's contributions to theory and research have been recognized by awarding him the 1983 Edwin H. Sutherland Award. The Sutherland Award recognizes Gibb's outstanding contributions to both theory and research in criminology. His research and theoretical contributions to the field date from 1953 when he published "Law and the Mores" with Austin Porterfield in Sociology and Social Research. Since that publication he has consistently made significant contributions to the field.

Gibb is currently Centennial Professor of Sociology at Vanderbilt University and a fellow of the American Society of Criminology.

The previous five winners are: Seymour Halleck (1978); James Short (1979); Gresham Sykes (1980); Albert Reiss, Jr. (1981); and Gwynn Nettler (1982).

CRIMINAL JUSTICE CAREER DIGEST EXPANDS FORMAT

Criminal Justice Career Digest, a monthly publication designed to communicate current employment vacancies in the Criminal Justice field, has expanded its format to publish articles addressing the many facets of career selection, training, advancement, motivation and development. The Editor-in-Chief will entertain other topics and these areas will be decided on an individual basis with the contributor. Writer's Guidelines and sample copy available upon request. Contact: Dr. I. Gayle Shuman, Editor-in-Chief, P.O. Box 565, Phoenix, AZ 85001; (602) 582-2002.

EDITOR SEEKS SUBMISSIONS FOR THE CRIMINOLOGIST

In order to broaden the Criminologist I am seeking the following materials:

- Descriptive articles on recent legislation;
- Reports on research findings not yet published in journals;
- Funding possibilities;
- Short comments on current issues; and
- other news of note.

If the response to this request for material supports expanding The Criminologist then I will request expansion of the size of the newsletter from the Executive Board.

All material submitted will indicate the source of the material.

I look forward to hearing from you.

John H. Kramer

AARP SEEKING INFORMATION ON VOLUNTEERS IN LAW ENFORCEMENT

A nationwide study of voluntarism in law enforcement is being conducted by the Criminal Justice Services section of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP). AARP requests readers' assistance in identifying agencies to be contacted. Data will be collected from law enforcement executives, volunteer supervisors, and volunteers themselves.

Please send AARP the names and addresses of agencies in which volunteers serve in crime prevention, crime analysis, or other support activities. If known, also include the phone number and person to be contacted within that agency. Send this information to:

Criminal Justice Services
AARP Program Department
1909 K Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20049

Findings of the study will be disseminated in 1984.

BJS REPORT SHOWS VICTIMIZATION DECLINE

Al Paez and Fred Shenk of the Bureau of Justice Statistics report that criminal victimization declined during 1982. In their September report entitled, "Criminal Victimization in the United States" they indicate almost 1.7 million fewer victimizations occurred in 1982 than in 1981.

Figure 1 reports victimization trends from 1973 through 1982 for specific categories of crimes. Figure 1 indicates that although crimes of violence as a group—rapes, robberies, and assaults—did not significantly decline there were significant declines in burglary and larcenies.

Residential burglary accounted for the largest share of the decline in the National Crime Survey. According to the Survey there were 731,000 fewer burglaries in 1982 than in 1981. This represented 43 percent of the entire decline in victimization.

The authors point out that the victimization rates have been relatively stable since the program began and that these changes between 1981 represent "one of the most sweeping, single-direction changes to have taken place since the program's inception."

NSF SUPPORTS SOCIAL SCIENTIST

National Science Foundation Law and Social Sciences Program continues to support social scientific studies of law and law-like system of rules. The primary consideration is that the research aims to advance a fundamental understanding of law and legal processes. The program has an "open window" for diverse theoretical perspectives, methods, and contexts for study. The next target date for the submission of proposals is February 1—for proposals to be funded after July 1984. For further information on application procedures, contact: Felice J. Levine, Program Director, Law and Social Sciences Program, National Science Foundation, Washington, DC 20550 (202) 357-9567.
