The American Society of Criminology embodies the following objectives:

1. To bring together, in one multidisciplinary society, persons actively engaged in research teaching, and/or practice in the field of criminology.
2. To foster criminological scholarship, research, education, and training within academic institutions and within the divisions of the criminal justice system, including public and private agencies concerned with crime, justice, and corrections.
3. To encourage scholarly, scientific, and practical exchange and cooperation among those engaged in criminology.
4. To serve as a forum for the dissemination of criminological knowledge.

Highlights of the 2008 ASC Program

Jody Miller and G. David Curry
University of Missouri-Saint Louis

The theme of the 2008 Annual Meeting of ASC reflects the intellectual and political commitments of ASC President Robert J. Bursik and the program chairs. Reinvigorating Theory through Diversity and Inclusiveness expresses beliefs that we hold strongly. Theory is as important as methods in understanding crime in human society. The inclusion of diverse voices—both among researchers and those researched—contributes to the breath and depth of our theory and understanding. We intentionally designed this year’s program specifically around this belief. As always, the regular thematic sessions offer many unique insights into these dynamics. However, especially noteworthy in this regard is the centrality of the 144 poster sessions and 52 roundtables to the program mission, for they foster a wider range of topics and presenters than typically is the case in more traditional paper sessions. Thursday evening’s poster sessions will feature a selection of Missouri wines and cheese, and many of Friday’s roundtable sessions will be held in the hotel’s Rose Garden room, with beautiful views of the St. Louis Riverfront and Arch.

Perhaps most notable for our goal of diversity and inclusiveness, a group that might not have even been considered as contributing to our understanding of crime 20 or 30 years ago are former correctional inmates. The informal group within the Society that has come to represent former convicted felons has taken the name “Convict Criminologists.” The Convict Criminology participants in ASC also include many non-convict criminologists who have been important to the group’s development and growth. One of Friday’s presidential panels will honor and feature Professor John Irwin, who—if not the first known—is unquestionably the foremost convict criminologist.

There are few criminologists who are not aware of the growing problem of mass incarceration in contemporary U.S. society, especially concentrated among African-American, Latino, and American Indian populations, and including disproportionate growth in the incarceration of women from these communities. Thursday’s presidential panel will call on Christy Visser and Pamela Lattimore to report preliminary findings from her unprecedented empirical study of inmate re-integration into the community.

We also feature a presidential panel on methodology, research and theory featuring a diverse group of junior and senior scholars. On Wednesday, Kristin Carbone-Lopez, Lee Ann Slocum, and Andres Rengifo will discuss the challenges of integrating qualitative and quantitative research; Molly Dragiewicz will address integrating feminist research and praxis; James Lynch will discuss the challenges of cross-national research; and Christine Horne will assess experimental research in criminology.

The political sector is where so many of the ideas generated in research must be made both practical and politically palatable. The second of Friday's presidential plenaries—Crime and Politics 2009—has been organized by Ted Gest, and will bring to the ASC audience a selection of national, state, and local political leaders to discuss these important issues.

In addition, this year's pre-conference methodology workshops (held on Tuesday November 11th) include hierarchical linear modeling and meta-analysis, as well as the ASC's inaugural workshop on qualitative data analysis, led by prominent ethnographers Patricia and Peter Adler. Details can be found at <http://www.asc41.com/annualmeeting.htm>.

You will also notice a change in the 2008 Program. Each of the ASC Divisions now has a "Sessions of Interest" page at the front end of the program, in order to improve the ease with which Division members identify sessions of interest.

Don't miss the St. Louis-based Fabulous Motown Revue, performing at Friday evening's Minority Fellowship Dance (<http://www.fabulousmotownrevue.com>). And the Presidential Lifetime Service Award will be given to Zaki Baruti, a St. Louisan who is currently President of the Universal African People's Organization and Co-Chair of the Coalition against Police Crimes and Repression. Find out more about his history of activism at <http://www.uapo.com>.

The emphasis on St. Louis in our program is not accidental, for it is a unique setting with a cultural and social history that reflects local slices of the best and worst of our country's history. Easily visible from the hotel is the court house where Dred and Harriet Scott were found to be free of slavery's yoke by having escaped to a free state. This decision so vital to the decades that followed was struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court. Just across the Mississippi River can be seen the outline of East St. Louis where the first of the great post-World War I race riots occurred when whites drove African-American citizens to flee across the river to the relative shelter of St. Louis. Likewise, within easy walking distance from the hotel are Scott Joplin's home, the intersection where Frankie was reputed to have shot Johnny, the location of the club where Josephine Baker began her career, and many other fascinating sites. For those who are interested in more formal tours, information will be available near the registration desk on a wide variety of opportunities, ranging from the blues scene of St. Louis to the Cahokia Indian Mounds (which at one time was the largest American city north of Mexico). It's going to be impossible to forget that St. Louis is a fascinating city regardless of one's personal tastes.

A SPECIAL THANK YOU

The American Society of Criminology wishes to extend a special thanks to the many publishers and government agencies that have once again chosen to exhibit their materials and sponsor numerous food events.

We greatly value your participation and note that your presence has become an integral aspect of our annual meeting experience. We thank you again, not just for your business, but your support of the field of criminology.
