The American Society of Criminology embodies the following objectives:

1. To bring together, in one multidisciplinary society, persons actively engaged in research teaching, and/or practice in the field of criminology.
2. To foster criminological scholarship, research, education, and training within academic institutions and within the divisions of the criminal justice system, including public and private agencies concerned with crime, justice, and corrections.
3. To encourage scholarly, scientific, and practical exchange and cooperation among those engaged in criminology.
4. To serve as a forum for the dissemination of criminological knowledge.

WELCOME TO THE 2011 ASC MEETING

Eric P. Baumer and Ryan D. King, ASC 2011 Program Co-Chairs

Welcome to Washington, D.C.! With more than 750 sessions, 2,500 papers, 250 posters, and several professional and social meetings on tap, the 2011 American Society of Criminology meeting promises to be an enjoyable experience.

The meeting includes the usual array of regular and thematic sessions, roundtables, and “authors meet critics” panels on each day of the conference (specific days and times for each session are listed in subsequent pages of the program), and the poster session – with refreshments – retains its usual time slot on Thursday (5:00-7:00 pm, International Ballroom, Center). Also, mark your calendars for two classic ASC traditions – the Wednesday evening ASC Awards Plenary (6:30-8:00 pm, International Ballroom East), and the Friday evening Presidential Plenary (6:30-7:30 pm, International Ballroom East). During the latter, President Steven Messner will present the ASC Award for Distinguished Contributions to Justice to Pulitzer Prize winning reporter, Linda Greenhouse. President Messner will close the plenary by enlightening the membership with his presentation titled “Morality, Markets, and the ASC.”

The overarching theme of the conference centers on innovation in research, policy, and teaching. When deciding on a theme for the conference more than one year ago, we thought of the annual meeting as an ideal venue for engaging in what Robert K. Merton called “specified ignorance” – giving explicit attention to what remains unknown but needs to be known in a field to advance disciplinary knowledge. At the same time, we sought to take full advantage of the conference location, which is of course at the heart of much policy making and research. Marrying the theme with the location ultimately gave way to a set of novel additions to this year’s program. Let us highlight just a few of these features.

The Presidential Panel Discussions, scheduled for the 3:30-4:50 pm time slots on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, break from the traditional mold of Presidential Plenaries both in their format and substance. Each panel will focus on innovative developments in criminology in the past and at present, and will devote special consideration to where the discipline must move in the future to advance our scientific knowledge and remain influential. The first panel focuses on innovations in criminological theory (Weds. 3:30-4:50 pm in JeffersonEast), the second on innovations in methodology in research on crime (Thurs. 3:30-4:50 pm in Jefferson East), and the third on innovations in criminal justice policy and practice (Fri. 3:30-4:50 pm in Jefferson West). The sessions will be conducted as genuine “discussions” among widely recognized experts in the field. Each panel is led by a skilled moderator who will guide the discussion with input and queries. If time permits, questions and commentary from the audience will also be welcomed.

The program also includes a series of innovative panels titled “Bridging the Gap between Research and Practice,” which will be held Friday in consecutive sessions (beginning at 9:30 am and ending at 4:50 pm) in Jefferson West. Four consecutive sessions – devoted to policing, victimization, corrections, and juvenile justice, respectively – will each entail two researchers and two practitioners from the DC area engaging in a facilitated discussion that focuses on what we know from the existing body of research, and perhaps more importantly, what we need to know. Each session is designed to entail lively dialogue between panelists and the audience, which will include ASC attendees and members of practitioner organizations.

This year’s program also features several panels related to learning, teaching, and navigating the halls of higher education. We are pleased that ASC members, without solicitation, have assembled several thematic panels relating to education. Some sessions delve into classroom strategies, as exemplified by a creative pair of panels on team-based learning (Shaking up the Criminal Justice Classroom, Thurs. 9:30-10:50 am and 11:00 am-12:20 pm, Holmead-H). Other sessions are designed to assist graduate students as they hit the job market (Success on the Job Market, Weds. 2:00-3:20 pm in Columbia Hall Room 2). We scheduled the latter early in the program with hopes that any useful tips acquired during these sessions can be applied in meetings with potential employers.

We also call attention to an innovative technological detail found at this year’s conference hotel. If you are struggling to find the various sessions highlighted above, or for that matter your own session, the hotel maps at the end of this program are complemented by interactive maps placed strategically throughout the hotel to illustrate where you are and where you need to go.

Though the conference schedule is sure to keep most of us busy throughout the day and well into the evening hours, there will be plenty to do “after hours.” We highly recommend that you place the Minority Fellowship Dance on your agenda (Friday, 10:00 pm -1:00 am, International Ballroom, Center). In accordance with the theme of the conference, we have also decided to be bold by tinkering with the dance a bit. Though the ASC has hired excellent bands to perform at the dance over the course of the last several years, the associated costs have steadily increased, and hence we have decided to experiment this year with a lower cost option – a DJ. We have contracted with a true talent from the DC area — DJ Elon — at a cost significantly lower than the amount originally budgeted for music by the ASC Board, and we have arranged to have the savings credited to the Minority Fellowship Fund. All indications are that DJ Elon has an extensive playlist and might even sing a tune from his own album, so we're hopeful that a diversity of musical tastes will be accommodated.

The host hotel and surrounding area are ideal for other breaks from the action. The Washington Hilton is a full-service hotel with ample options for meeting up with others for food and beverages. The hotel is also nestled centrally within Adams Morgan, Woodley Park, and the U Street Corridor, an area that offers some of the best eats, drinks, music, and other attractions in the city. Those hoping to see many of the well-known attractions in the nation's capital are also in luck; the Dupont Circle (Red Line) Metro Station is a mere four blocks away.

Let us close by wishing you all a wonderful meeting. We hope it is filled with stimulating discussions about the discipline and offers a chance to socialize with old friends and colleagues, and perhaps become acquainted with other scholars and practitioners. And if you happen to meet them, be sure to take a moment to thank all who helped make the conference possible. We are particularly thankful to those who served on the various awards committees and the stellar group of scholars who contributed as program sub-area chairs, helping us with the initial development of the panels and other sessions that form the heart of the meeting. Additionally, we all owe a significant debt of gratitude to Chris Eskridge, Sue Beelman, Nicole Coldiron and Lauren Porter for their tireless efforts. Finally, we are especially grateful to Susan Case. Susan is truly an invaluable asset to the ASC and always had the answers to our many questions. She is indeed like 'co-chair Tylenol' - she saved us from many headaches – and we are fortunate to have worked with her and the team at the ASC front office in planning this event.

Enjoy the meeting!

A SPECIAL THANK YOU

The American Society of Criminology wishes to extend a special thanks to the many publishers and government agencies that have once again chosen to exhibit their materials and sponsor numerous food events.

We greatly value your participation and note that your presence has become an integral aspect of our annual meeting experience. We thank you again, not just for your business, but your support of the field of criminology.
