

Lycoming College invites applications for two tenure-track positions in Criminal Justice-Criminology at the Assistant Professor level beginning Fall 2025. The Department of Criminal Justice-Criminology has approximately 100 majors and minors and seeks to provide students with strong foundational knowledge to prepare them for careers in the field, while also encouraging students to consider a range of perspectives in understanding crime and criminal behavior. Students are given the skills to think critically and use evidence-based research when seeking to address issues the system faces. The department has strong connections with local, county and federal criminal justice agencies in the area and so significant opportunities and support exists for research, volunteer and community-based learning experiences for faculty and students. Successful candidates must have a commitment to excellence in undergraduate teaching, inclusive excellence and a dedication to the value of a liberal arts education. Candidates will have the opportunity to shape and influence the curriculum and types of opportunities offered to students. While all areas of specialization will be considered for hire, specific expertise in security studies is prioritized for one of the positions as the College seeks to expand its curriculum to incorporate this area of study. Candidates will have the opportunity to teach courses in their specialty within their 3/3 teaching load. Preference will be given to candidates who are willing to teach courses core to the curriculum, specifically research methods and a senior capstone course. A PhD in criminal justice and criminology or related disciplines is preferred; however, ABDs who are nearing completion will be considered and are encouraged to apply.

Who We Are

Founded in 1812, Lycoming College is one of the nation's oldest and most respected residential liberal arts and sciences colleges and has been recognized for the quality of its experiential programming and supporting students in gaining the skills needed to succeed in today's world. Students partner with faculty in doing original research, thrive in a robust program of internships, study abroad in more than two dozen countries and compete in 19 NCAA Division III sports. Lycoming College's strong endowment per student provides the foundation to support a first-rate undergraduate education.

Ranked as a top 100 national liberal arts college, Lycoming offers more than 100 majors, minors, and concentrations to about 1,100 active learners, representing 31 states, territories and 16 countries. International and domestic students of color comprise 37% of the student body with 53% women and 47% men.

The College proudly celebrates and values the principles of inclusive excellence. In its 2021 Strategic Plan, Lycoming College committed to recruiting more faculty and staff from historically underrepresented groups. The community works to foster an inclusive campus community and to support the success of all faculty, staff and students. The College recognizes that a diverse faculty, staff and student body benefits all students and community members and advances our goal of preparing its graduates to become ethical, informed and engaged individuals.

Lycoming College is an equal-opportunity employer.

To apply: Applicants must apply online at www.lycoming.edu and should include a letter describing their teaching philosophy and how it aligns with the mission of a small liberal arts college, specifically inclusive excellence; their specific teaching and research interests; a curriculum vitae; copies of transcripts, sample syllabi; and the names and contact information for three references, at least one of which is able to speak to the candidate's teaching abilities. Inquiries may be directed to the chair of the search committee, Julie Yingling, at yingling@lycoming.edu.

Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis. Applications submitted by December 15, 2024 will be given full consideration.

Visit our website at <https://www.lycoming.edu/criminal-justice/> to learn more about our department.