School of Criminal Justice

Recruitment/Posting Title Assistant Professor, Tenure-Track

Department School of Criminal Justice

Salary Commensurate With Experience

The School of Criminal Justice at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, invites applications for a tenure-track assistant professor position for Fall 2024. The ideal candidate will broaden the School's existing strengths in the multidisciplinary study of crime, justice, and punishment. Successful candidates will demonstrate dynamic research agendas, effective teaching pedagogies, and meaningful engagements in service activities and public scholarship. Applicants must have a PhD in Criminology, Criminal Justice, or related social science or humanities disciplines upon appointment. The Rutgers School of Criminal Justice is located in Newark, NJ. We are a leading urban institution of higher education and committed to diversity and inclusion.

Posting Summary

RESPONSIBILITIES

Faculty are expected to sustain an active record of scholarly work and publications. Teaching responsibilities include undergraduate and graduate courses. Additional responsibilities include advising and mentoring graduate and undergraduate students, assisting the school with administrative and/or committee responsibilities, participating in professional conferences, and contributing to campus-wide committees and major events such as commencement. Successful candidates will have opportunities to contribute to vibrant degree programs including a new justice studies program (undergraduate) and a dual criminal justice/social work degree (MA/MSW). These new offerings add to our core programs in criminal justice (B.S, M.A, and Ph.D).

The committee will begin reviewing applications on May 20th, 2024. Send inquiries to Dr. Andres Rengifo, Search Committee Chair, at arengifo@scj.rutgers.edu.
