

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH FLORIDA: The Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice (CCJ) invites applications for an on-campus tenure-track Assistant Professor position starting August 2025 (Position P-00002202), with a preferred specialization in Cybersecurity or Homeland Security, but all areas will be considered. The position requires a doctorate in Criminology, Criminal Justice, or closely related discipline by July 30, 2025.

The CCJ department at UNF includes approximately 400 majors and 55 graduate students in the MSCJ program. A successful candidate will be expected to maintain an active research agenda, meaningfully contribute to our undergraduate and master programs, and demonstrate excellence in teaching, research, and service. UNF faculty are expected to maintain the highest standards of academic excellence in all phases of instruction, research/scholarship/creative activity, and service.

UNF enrolls about 17,000 students and is located in Jacksonville, Florida, a rapidly growing metropolitan area with a population of over one million. Jacksonville is part of northeastern Florida's historic "First Coast" and there are significant historical, cultural, and recreational resources in the immediate area including access to rivers and beaches. In recent years, UNF has transitioned to an R2 institution with an increasing focus on research while maintaining excellence in teaching. Faculty at UNF are on flexible teaching loads, typically teaching between four to six courses per year, with newly hired faculty on a reduced load of two courses per semester for the first three years. Continued reduced teaching loads may be offered to faculty demonstrating significant accomplishments aligned with the university's strategic plan (<https://www.unf.edu/strategic-plan/index.html>).

UNF is a Carnegie Community Engaged institution. This designation celebrates the University's collaboration with community partners from the local to the global level. It reflects UNF's mission to contribute to the public good and prepare educated, engaged citizens. We are especially interested in candidates who can contribute to the excellence of the academic community through their research, teaching and service.

The successful candidate will be able to excel at teaching courses throughout the curriculum, conduct externally funded research involving undergraduate and graduate students, and engage in service to the department, university, and discipline. They will demonstrate the commitment and capability to provide an excellent learning environment for students, work with student-centered methods of instruction, and contribute to the continuing development and implementation of curricular content. Applicants are encouraged to detail their experiences in working with, teaching, and mentoring students from a variety of backgrounds.

To be considered for this position, applicants must complete an online application and upload supplemental documents at www.unfjobs.org. The application must include a CV, letter of interest, list of three (3) professional references, evidence of both teaching and research effectiveness, and a statement outlining areas of teaching interest. The initial review of applications will begin on 10/15/2024 and continue until the position is filled. For
